

Song about Alzheimer disease

He can't remember...

I looked in his eyes and they seemed empty
“Pappy” is no longer what he was
He got a good job and raised a family
But now he couldn't remember things he does

Always had a joke, happy to be around
Trying so hard to keep thoughts inside his head
But that damned disease made him touch the ground
His body keeps on going but his brain is going dead

And when Pappy tries to speak,
It's so hard his mind's so weak.
He can't remember . . .

He looks in my eyes and asks me my name
His mind is as blank as the walls
And every five minutes I tell him the same
His memory is as vacant as the halls

He doesn't recognise his own kids
That damned disease, look what it did
Someone you've known all your life asks your name
Alzheimer disease we have to blame

And when Pappy tries to speak,
It's so hard his mind's so weak.
He can't remember . . .
